A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

THE Editor of the BIBLIOTHECA TOPOGRAPHICA BRITAN-NICA having the use of six plates, engraved at the expence of the late Mr. E. Rowe Mores, with a view to some account of GREAT COXWELL, in the county of Berks, where his family were seated from the beginning of the 16th century, thought he could not apply them to a better purpose than in ornamenting such particulars as he has been able to procure respecting that parish. In this second set of Answers to his Queries he acknowledges his obligations to John Richmond Webb, of Stilton, in the county of Wilts, Esq; who is at present possessed of considerable property in this parish. These outlines are in part filled up by such notes relating to the parish as were found among Mr. Mores's Berkshire papers, in the hands of Mr. Gough.

THE BIRTH OF THE AMERICAN TORPEDO BOAT
The first of the American torpedo boats was built at the Navy Yard at Boston in 1862.
It was a small boat, only 40 feet long,
and was armed with a single torpedo.
The boat was built for the purpose of attacking the enemy's fleet, and was designed to be used in the harbor.
The boat was built by the Navy Yard at Boston, and was the first of its kind in the world.

A MONG the various Labours of Literary Men, there have always been certain Fragments whose Size could not secure them a general Exemption from the Wreck of Time, which their intrinsic Merit entitled them to survive; but, having been gathered up by the Curious, or thrown into Miscellaneous Collections by Booksellers, they have been recalled into Existence, and by uniting together have defended themselves from Oblivion. Original Pieces have been called in to their Aid, and formed a Phalanx that might withstand every Attack from the Critic to the Cheesemonger, and contributed to the Ornament as well as Value of Libraries.

With a similar view it is here intended to present the Publick with some valuable Articles of BRITISH TOPOGRAPHY, from printed Books and MSS. One Part of this Collection will consist of Re-publications of scarce and various Tracts; another of such MS. Papers as the Editors are already possessed of, or may receive from their Friends.

It is therefore proposed to publish a Number occasionally, not confined to the same Price or Quantity of Sheets, nor always adorned with Cuts; but paged in such a Manner, that the general Articles, or those belonging to the respective Counties, may form a separate Succession, if there should be enough published, to bind in suitable Classes; and each Tract will be completed in a single Number.

Into this Collection all Communications consistent with the Plan will be received with Thanks. And as no Correspondent will be denied the Privilege of controverting the Opinions of another, so none will be denied Admittance without a fair and impartial Reason.

* * * This Number contains Six Plates, and Two Half-Sheet Pedigrees, which are all properly paged.

Some Account of GREAT COXWELL, in the County of BERKS, in answer to the Queries proposed in the first number of this work.

1. THE ancient name was Cokewell, Cokyswell; the modern is Coxwell.

2. It is two miles South of Farringdon, the hundred town, four miles North East of Highworth in Wilts, and 14 miles South West of Abingdon, the county town.

4. It is 72 miles from London. Carriage 2s. 6d. per hundred to Farringdon.

5. Its extent is about one mile each way.

6. It lies in the North West part of Berks, in the hundred of Farringdon, situate at the South foot of a hill called Badbury Hill. It has no hamlets.

7. The number of houses is 50, of inhabitants 250. Freeholders, John Richmond Webb 150l. per annum, Mr. Bastard 125l. per annum, Mr. Vincent 10l. per annum. Two freehold cottages. The other lands in the parish belong to the earl of Radnor.

8. See extracts from the register hereafter.

9. It was formerly part of the manor of Farringdon, but is now a manor of itself; the earl of Radnor lord of it*. Jan. 25,

* Before and after the Conquest both the Coxwells were royal demesne.

1204, king John granted the manor of Farrendon, viz. Great Farrendon and Little Farrendon, and Great Cokewell and Little Cokewell, with the chapel of Cokewell*, to the abbey of Beaulieu †, in Hants, which was suppressed in 1538. In that year Thomas Mores was lord of the manor of both Coxwells, to whom king Henry VIII. granted several buildings, as appears by the plate of the Barn. The manor of Great Coxwell continued in the family of Mores till about the middle of the next century, when Sir George Pratt, of Colehill, in Berks, bart. became possessed of it, and devised it in fee to Dame Margaret Pratt, his wife, who by her will dated July 14, 1697, charged it with her debts, legacies, and funeral expences, and directed it, or such part of it as should be sufficient for that purpose, to be sold. After her decease, on the 16th of December, 1700, George Pratt Richmond alias Webb, her grandson, purchased under her will the house and barn in the plates, and 150 acres of land, part of the manor, and from him they came by will to the present possessor John Richmond Webb, of Milton, in Wilts, esq. The manor of Great Coxwell, and the lands unfold, descended to the earl of Radnor.

10. The pedigrees of Mores and the earl of Radnor are annexed.

11. Here are no particular customs, courts, or exemptions.

12. The house in plate I. is the ancient manor house. It is called Court House, and is the only house in the parish of any consequence. It has two rooms on the ground floor 20 feet by 20. In the memory of man there stood a chapel at the back part of the house, which was pulled down, and the vicarage house built with the materials. This chapel must be the Capella infra capital. mess. in the grant of king Henry VIII. Here was a cell of Cistercians, tradition says Cluniacs, from Beaulieu abbey.

* See his charter of foundation of Beaulieu abbey, Mon. Ang. I. 926.

† This abbey had free warren in both Coxwells. Cart. 39. E. III. n. 6. Tan. Notit. Mon. 164.

In the parish Church of Great Cornwell, at the entrance into the chancel, 20 May 1749.

It is not mentioned by bishop Tanner. The building in plates II. and III. is called by the inhabitants King John's Stable, and is now used as a barn. It measures in length 140 feet, in breadth 40, and is 30 feet high from the floor to the beam. The posts that support the beams stand on stone pedestals 10 feet high. When it was built, or for what purpose, is at present unknown. As there was a cell of Cistercians here, it may reasonably be supposed to have been intended for a granary to receive such rents from the tenants as might be paid in rough corn. The Antiquary may have some difficulty in determining whether this building is the Camera sup. voltam, or Nova Aula sup. Pincernam. Mr. Mores, in the inscription under it on the plate, calls it Horreum.

13. The buildings have no arms or dates, &c.

14. The church stands in the diocese of Salisbury, deanry of Abingdon, and archdeaconry of Berks, at the South end of the parish, within the manor of Great Coxwell, in the hundred of Farringdon.

15. Its is dedicated to St. Giles. It is an ancient fabrick built of stone, but when unknown. Has a tower at the West end 15 feet square. See it engraved plates IV. and V.

17. The body of the church is 66 feet long and 18 wide. It has no ailes or chapels. There are five bells in the tower, and one to summon to prayers.

19. There is no other remarkable monument or grave-stone but that on plate VI. William Mores there mentioned must be the second son of Thomas Mores, to whom king Henry VIII. granted the buildings in the plate. In the chancel, on two grave stones, are the following inscriptions in Roman capitals:

Here lyeth the bodye of 35. On the top of Badbury Hill, on the North side of the turnpike road leading from Farringdon to Highworth, and within a few yards of it, is a camp of a circular form, 200 yards in diameter, with a ditch 10 yards wide. About nine years ago, in levelling the North rampart, human bones and coals were found, and human bones are found every year in digging for peat in swampy ground about one mile South of the hill. Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. II. page 20, says, that he " learned of " certainty that a mile out of Farringdon, towards the right way to " Highworth, appeared a great ditch, wher a fortresse, or rather

 " a camp of warre, hath beene, as some say, diked by the Danes
 " as a sure camp." Mr. Wise, in his letter to Dr. Mead, concerning some antiquities in Berkshire, page 49, supposes, that the battle of Mons Badonicus, or Badbury Hill, as he calls it, in the year 520, mentioned by Bede and Gildas, in which Arthur gained his twelfth victory, was fought near the White Horse Hill; but, if from the similitude of names it may be concluded that the battle happened in this neighbourhood, there is much more probability of this being the spot than of the Wiltshire hills being so, as this camp is Danish, and nearer to the White Horse than the other, the fortifications of which are Roman. Between this camp and the White Horse Hills is a plain or dead flat, five miles 5 wide,
